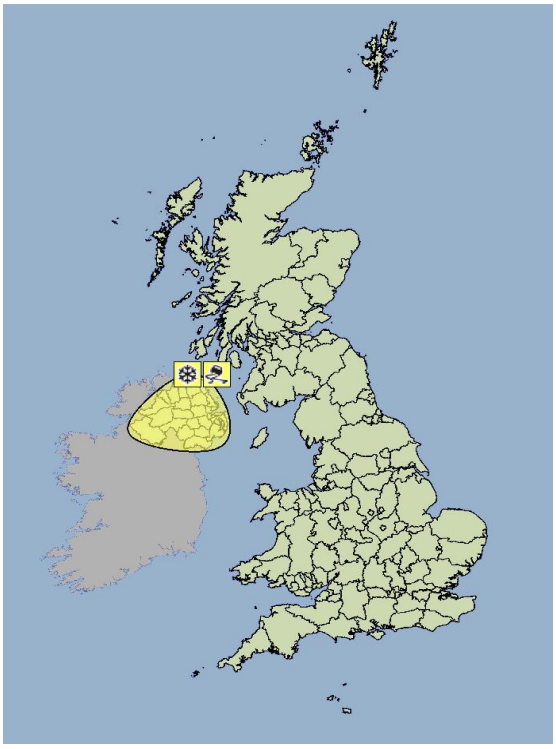
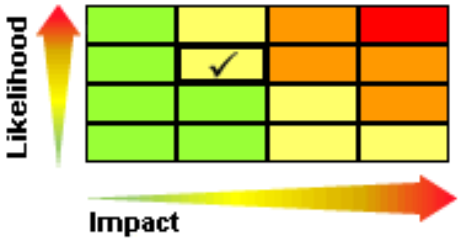
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A band of snow and rain is expected to move northeastwards over Northern Ireland later on Thursday night and during Friday morning. Snow is more likely over the north and west of Northern Ireland where it will fall to low levels for a time before tending to turn to rain towards dawn. Elsewhere any snow will be temporary and the greater risk is for rain to fall onto frozen surfaces leading to ice for an hour or two after the rain begins.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 00:05 on Fri, 29th Dec 2017 until 09:00 on Fri, 29th Dec 2017

A spell of snow, along with the risk of rain falling on frozen surfaces leading to ice, is likely across parts of Northern Ireland during Friday morning.

Some roads and railways are likely to be affected leading to longer journey times by road, bus and train services. Some delays to air travel are also possible. Some injuries from slips and falls on icy surfaces are possible.
